Director Fitzgerald, Chairmen Blunt and Cole, Ranking Members Murray and DeLauro:

As local, state, and national leaders who believe that our federal government should harness the power of data and evidence to solve our nation's most pressing challenges, we are writing to strongly urge the Trump Administration to rescind the guidance described in the December 16th Washington Post article that reportedly prohibits the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) from using certain words and phrases - including "evidence-based" and "science-based" - in its FY2019 budget documents.

We also urge the U.S. House and Senate appropriations committees with jurisdiction over the CDC to include language in the FY2018 appropriations bill preventing the CDC from imposing this or any other similar ban on its employees.

We recognize and appreciate the bipartisan Members of Congress and committed career civil servants who have continued to build upon the evidence-based policy-making efforts of the G.W. Bush and Obama Administrations. However, we are deeply dismayed by repeated attempts by the Trump Administration to undermine the federal government's focus on science and evidence. We call on all policymakers in both parties to reject these efforts.

Sincerely,
